Lone Star Skynyrd Bio

Anybody who ever tapped their foot, sang along or danced to “Sweet Home Alabama;” “ Saturday Night Special;” “What’s Your Name;” “Tuesday’s Gone;” “Simple Man;” or “Free Bird” already knows what we’re all about.

We honor a group of talented, hardworking, hell-raising southern musical virtuosos that pronounced themselves Lynyrd Skynyrd. After almost a decade in the nightclub circuit, Skynyrd first blasted through the radio airwaves in 1973, heralding a new and distinct Southern style of captivating guitar anthems and down-home, heartfelt lyrics, all layered with a bold swagger and charm.

By 1977, Skynyrd had become the finest American rock & roll band, a kind of Southern-fried Rolling Stones, releasing their fifth studio album, the masterful Street Survivors, which would go on to platinum sales. Just three days later, however, at the pinnacle of their meteoric artistic and commercial success, tragedy struck.

Yet, today, more than ever, Skynyrd’s music is everywhere and anywhere there’s a party. Featured in films, TV shows, Classic Rock and Satellite radio and more, the music is still unique and still captivating fans old and new.

Lone Star Skynyrd is a Dallas, Texas brotherhood of longtime musicians who feel privileged to recreate the timeless Skynyrd songs ingrained in the American consciousness. We play these songs because fans still play these songs. From Sweet Home Alabama and Free Bird; and everything in between, these astounding classics always receive a passionate response from every audience everywhere we play.

Our band stays true to the original Skynyrd approach of a trio of exceptional guitarists, a rhythm section that punches like Ali in his prime and forceful vocals that are augmented with sweet female harmonies.

Lone Star Skynyrd counts among its many fans current Lynyrd Skynyrd vocalist Johnny Van Zant and original Skynyrd guitar tech and plane crash survivor Craig Reed who calls Lone Star Skynyrd “Impressive, to say the least.”

Lone Star Skynyrd has shared the stage with national acts, including the Charlie Daniels Band, Wade Bowen and Molly Hatchet. We’ve headlined sold-out shows at casinos, theaters, concert venues and large outdoor festival events, such as:
