Lone Star Skynyrd Earns 2022 Josie Music Award for Tribute Band of the Year

“The South’s gonna do it again,” the late music legend Charlie Daniels once sang. Charlie was right. There’s been no shortage of great bands from the south ever since. But one that might’ve surprised Charlie and his close pal, the late Ronnie Van Zant—the driving force behind Lynyrd Skynyrd—is Lone Star Skynyrd and the prestigious music industry trophy they just won.

Yup. A tribute band from Texas. But far from just any tribute band. Lone Star Skynyrd is a brotherhood of highly skilled musicians respected for their sizzling, note-for-note recreations of Skynyrd’s timeless southern boogie and down home classics like Sweet Home Alabama, Gimme Three Steps, Simple Man and Free Bird.

And now, Lone Star Skynyrd earned a coveted 2022 Josie Music Award to prove they’ve perfected the classic Skynyrd concert experience and can bring it to a festival, fair or casino near you. The Josie Music Awards is the biggest, privately-owned, independent music awards show representing all genres across the globe. And their thorough music industry review process named Lone Star Skynyrd the best tribute band. Think of every tribute band out there. Only one brought home the hardware.

“Standing on the Grand Ol’ Opry stage to accept the Josie Award was an incredible dream come true for all of us in the band. I’ll never forget it,” says Steven Naylor, lead singer of Lone Star Skynyrd. “Skynyrd music is honest, brilliant American rock and roll. Our crowds and venues keep getting bigger. We do Ronnie and the boys proud and we invite y’all to hear it live.”
